Boffa Miskell Design Leader Appointed

3 November 2009

We are delighted to announce Rachel de Lambert's appointment to a newly created role – Boffa Miskell Director: Design.

Rachel is a widely respected landscape architect who joined Boffa Miskell in 1988 after completing her post-graduate studies. She has been a director of the company since 1998. Rachel has broad-ranging experience in landscape and urban design projects and is recognised for her highly collaborative style of working within design teams.

"I am very excited and enthusiastic about the potential this position creates for Boffa Miskell and feel extremely lucky to have the opportunity to put time and energy into pursuing something for the company that is also my passion".

The appointment reflects the importance that Boffa Miskell places on design within the suite of environmental consulting services that the company offers.

"Boffa Miskell's beginnings were in landscape architecture and creative, design-led thinking. Over the years, we have broadened our services across the field of environmental planning and that multi-disciplinary service will remain our core. However, at the same time, we want to re-establish a sharp focus on design and creativity as a key differentiator".
